Dear Dr Krishnaiah,

Queensland Industrial Relations Commission – WC/2024/227 – my workers' compensation appeal

Thank you for your email of 5 September 2026, and for offering to provide me with my records. I have requested them separately and I understand your position about medico-legal work. I am writing about a different and much smaller question.

On 9 September 2026 I filed with the Commission a list of the witnesses I may call at the hearing of my appeal. You are named on that list as my treating psychiatrist, together with my general practitioner Dr Peter Hawes.

The appeal is a hearing before the Queensland Industrial Relations Commission. Under the Commission's Workers' Compensation Appeal Guide, all evidence is given orally and there are no witness statements or affidavits. The Guide also states that "presenting a medical report on its own cannot be considered without having the expert witness give evidence orally to support that document and being available for cross-examination by the other party".

I am not asking you to prepare a report, to review any material, or to express any opinion in advance. I am asking only whether you are able to attend to give evidence about your own treatment of me and your own records.

Two practical matters. The Commission allows expert witnesses to give evidence by telephone or video rather than in person. And the Commission can issue an attendance notice requiring attendance on a fixed date and time, which some practitioners prefer because it fixes the commitment and formalises the request; conduct money is payable to expert witnesses at the applicable rate, and I will pay it.

What that would involve is your evidence of your own treatment: when I first attended, on 24 October 2024; what you recorded at that time; the diagnosis you made and have maintained; the treatment you have provided; and the contents of your report of 13 February 2025, which was prepared for QSuper and which I have identified to the other party as a treating record. You would then be asked questions by the Respondent's representative.

Could you please let me know by Friday 2 October 2026 whether you are willing to attend, and if so whether you would prefer to be given an attendance notice. If it is easier, your practice manager can reply on your behalf.

I am grateful for your time.

Yours sincerely,

Cory Lea Shepherd
